FIFA is the world's most popular sports video game. It was launched in August of 1992 and is by far the most popular football (soccer) game in the world. Featuring millions of authentic licenses from around the world and coming complete with weekly live news updates, what makes FIFA so popular? It's better team management. FC Barcelona were developing a game to market in the 1990s. It was intended for the next generation of gaming systems. At this point, competing sports management games were only available on the Game Boy and it was hoped that FIFA would be available on the much sought after SNES. It did extremely well. FC Barcelona's game was a huge hit. The game was mainly based on a simulation of the exact game that was taken live on TV by a group of analysts. They received the information from a computer. The information was encoded and sent via a satellite network. This information would be coded to get to the TV screen and then re-coded again into the computer so that the computer could understand it. Compare that to today's technology, where information is sent in real time to a television screen and played immediately. Today's technology of using a Xbox with a TV, has given us access to the game on any device. It's a lot easier to enjoy the game. As the years have passed, developers have incorporated improvements. New technologies such as the EA SPORTS™ Engine, hardware enhancements and game modes have all contributed to bringing the game closer to the real thing. What is the EA SPORTS™ Engine? When we sit down in front of a TV and play a video game, we are playing a video game. This means that there is nothing special about our TV. It's just an HDTV. When you're playing on a Xbox, the TV becomes something special. An Xbox can run a game at over 120 frames per second which means that detail is packed in. Video games are technically very complex. Running at a high frame rate combined with a higher detail level is not very affordable, which is why we've never seen a game that looked as good as a real football match. Here at EA SPORTS™ we are constantly striving to make the game look as good as possible and we needed a very specific engine to achieve this. This engine is called the EA SPORTS™ Engine. It has gained fame and success when used by the bc9d6d6daa
