PDF, PLS, DOC, RTF, Spreadsheet, Presentation, Word, Images, JPG, TIFF,.For the first time in 94 years, British voters will not be electing a Labour government. The surprise win for Boris Johnson's Conservatives is not just a rejection of Theresa May's plans for Brexit. It also throws open the prospect of a Boris Johnson administration that will be out of step with the national mood. Johnson's appointment as Tory leader last month was supposed to end the Tory divisions over Brexit. Now he has been forced by the British people to govern as an even more-hardline Brexiteer than the one he and his colleagues engineered. No former Tory prime minister has lost an election since 1922. But in Johnson, his party has brought to power someone who has not been a cabinet member since the days of Margaret Thatcher, who has no majority in the Commons and who has already pronounced he will "do or die" for Brexit. It is time for Theresa May's allies, both inside the cabinet and in the Speaker's lobby, to make a choice. Will they work with Johnson in a new government or will they do everything they can to try to keep Britain in the European Union? There are four possible outcomes here.

The first is that Johnson goes to negotiate Brexit, and negotiations with the EU – especially on the Irish backstop – continue for the full two years to the autumn of 2020. The second is a general election, as long as it does not fall within Johnson's first 100 days in office and is defeated – as the second May vote was. The third is that Johnson resigns, maybe even by standing down in the Conservative leadership election. It will be hard for him to resign without a general election, and there is no reason to expect that a potential Tory leadership hustings now would change anything. So expect the Brexit timetable to run on, with the aim of leaving without any deal in place by the autumn of 2020. The fourth possibility is that Johnson resigns. Then a snap election will be held, and he is replaced by Theresa May's next candidate, whoever he or she may be. The new leader, whatever his or her political
